University of Winnipeg President & Former Canadian Foreign Affairs Minister to Address Hong Kong-Canada Chamber of Commerce

HONG KONG—Dr. Lloyd Axworthy, President of The University of Winnipeg and former Canadian Foreign Affairs Minister, will address the Hong Kong-Canada Chamber of Commerce at 1:00 p.m. on Monday, November 21, 2005 on the issue of “Human Rights in the Face of Globalization.”

Axworthy, nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize for his part in the Ottawa Convention banning anti-personnel landmines, will talk with Chamber members about the most pressing issues affecting human security today: infectious disease, climate change, poverty, and conflict.

The advent of globalization has meant that the world is increasingly defined by what we share, not by what divides us. Truly global citizens must begin to understand that threats to human security are not limited to the national stage, to be addressed by the governments of any lone nation; rather, issues of climate change, SARS, and nuclear arms proliferation are global threats that require broader awareness and international cooperation.

“In the post 9/11 world there is an ever-creeping erosion of our democratic rights and civil liberties,” said Axworthy. “We are witnessing today the transformative clash between two global networks. One of terror, unbound by territory, linked by thin tendrils of finance and communications, single-mindedly dedicated to the destruction of its enemy. The other is centred in the world’s most powerful state, but with spokes and connections encompassing a vast military machine with economic and diplomatic nodes that too often asserts the right to be above the law. We must find ways to offer alternatives and seek a sense of human security, based on human rights and the rule of law.”

Dr. Axworthy will draw from his experience as Canada’s Minister of Foreign Affairs where he brought to the world stage the Canadian-led concept of The Responsibility to Protect (R2P), a phrase that describes an evolving concept about the duties of all governments to prevent and end unconscionable acts of violence against the people of the world, wherever they occur.

While in Hong Kong, Dr Axworthy will meet with Hong Kong University of Science and Technology’s President Paul Chu and other senior officials and tour the university’s central research facilities. Dr Axworthy will visit the SME Expo, as well as talk with students at the Canadian International School. Dr Axworthy will also address students and members of the media at Hong Kong University on the topic of “Human Security in the Global Era.” On Tuesday, November 22, 2005, members of The University of Winnipeg Hong Kong alumni will meet with Dr. Axworthy at a special Alumni Reception. He is visiting Hong Kong from November 19-22, 2005 and then will travel to Xi'an and Beijing.
